

Internet Advertising and Consulting

Last Updated Tuesday, 01 July 2008

I have lived most of my life in Kansas City, Missouri USA. In the beginning most of my knowledge was "self taught." I started writing web pages in 1994. Way back then, there wasn't any tools, to help you make a web page. So I used what everyone else did at that time, I used MS notepad. Since there were very few books on the Internet available at the time I just studied how other people made web pages and that is how I learned.

As time went on and clear up to today I have strived to learn the latest innovations to the Internet. I have never been satisfied with my knowledge of the Internet and have always wanted to learn more. This quest for knowledge has driven me to where I am today. That fascination with the Internet and the need to abreast with the latest developments.

As my business has grown over the years I have been forced to expand my technology base. When I had so many web pages that I could not afford the web hosting fees I started my own web hosting company. When my web pages developed a lot of traffic I started my own web banner advertising business. So, without going into all of the details I think you can see what has driven me to this point.

I am telling you all of this because, I feel that when you are trying to decide to use my services and do business with me you need to know a lot about me.
